REPORT

OF THE

Superintendent of Schools

To the School Board and Citizens of Landaff:

I consider it proper in this report to explain briefly the organization of this supervisory district and to state my relations to the schools and teachers of Landaff. This supervisory district is made up of the Landaff school district and the three districts in the town of Lisbon. The school boards of these districts form a joint committee which elect a superintendent, determine the character and value of his services, and apportion the same among the several districts. One half of this salary is paid by the state.

The duties and powers of the superintendent are such as the school board deem it wise to delegate to him. In general, it is his business to report to the board the condition of the schools, give his opinion of the qualification and success of teachers, hunt up new teachers and recommend to the board in case of vacancies. He sees that the books and supplies and other property of the district are properly used, and recommends to the school board books and supplies adapted to the needs of the schools. He endeavors to secure, so far as possible, unity and organized effort in the town school system. This unity is essential both from an educational and from a financial standpoint. He organizes the work of the teachers, makes timely suggestions as to the methods, and assists them in discipline, instruction and in securing better attendance. The possible lines of his work are many and varied. Particularly is this true of a superintendent in a new district who finds many minor matters to claim his attention.

Some will ask, "When shall we get results, definite results that will warrant this additional expense?" It is the duty of a superintendent not to revolutionize the school system all at once and to turn things upside down, but to study the conditions thoroughly and carefully, even the most minute details, and then to work along lines that will be of benefit to the pupils, the schools and to the town. Now any fair minded person will realize that definite, appreciable results must, of necessity, come slowly and only from a steady and patient improvement in the results produced by the schools as they are at the beginning of supervision.

In the first place I desire to call attention to the record of visitors as shown in the statistical report. It is clear that the parents do not show their interest in the schools by visiting them. I take it that every parent has something more to do than to pay his school tax and to send his children to school. He ought to have an interest strong enough to lead him to find out just the kind of place he is sending his children to, what kind of a teacher there is in the school and what the children are really doing. Intelligent criticism on the part of the parents is what the school officials desire, but this can be given only from first hand information. A criticism which can justly be made of our school conditions today is the drifting apart of the school and the home. For the interests of both there needs to be a reuniting.

One of the greatest needs is a greater sense of responsibility in regard to attendance of children. Physical and mental conditions permitting, no sacrifice should be so great, no hardship so severe, as to keep for one single session, or any part of a session, a child from the public school. A study of the problem of tardiness in practically all cases reveals that the child is late at school because his parents at home have the easy habit of being behind hand. Punctuality tends towards an increased efficiency of the school; it tends towards an increased efficiency of the boy and the girl.

The tardy boy is often the unsatisfactory pupil, and later the inefficient man.

To the best of his ability the superintendent has encouraged good attendance, and the teachers have striven conscientiously to keep the pages of their registers clean. The attendance for the past two terms has been good, much better than in the past. Yet it can and should be improved from term to term. Each half-day's attendance means so much more money from the state. During the coming term teachers and superintendent will make every effort possible to secure an increased attendance. We solicit the cooperation of the parents.

No change in school books has been made during the year. The one noticeable lack is reading material of sufficient quantity and of a quality adapted to the needs of the pupils. This is shown in the inability of the pupils to read easily and correctly. The way to learn to read is by reading. We have given extra effort to the teaching of reading and shall devote even more time to it next term. I consider it the weak point in our schools, and hold the lack of the pupils' ability in this line mainly responsible for unsatisfactory conditions in other work. The popular idea is that a pupil who has read through a primer is ready for first reader; that having read that, he is ready for a second reader and so on. That is a wrong idea and is responsible for much of the poor reading. Reading one book of a grade does not give him practice enough to meet the increased difficulty of the next book. He should read at least three books of the same grade before he takes a more advanced book.

Arithmetic is a great problem. I do not think it is a question of books. Any good text is sufficient. It is just a question of definite system, thorough painstaking work, and everlasting drill and review.

We are now using the New Hampshire Program of Studies for Elementary Schools, a copy of which every teacher has as her text-book and guide. This manual contains a course of study, with suggestions and helps, prepared under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, and aims to secure greater efficiency and more uniformity in the work of the schools throughout the state.

The ability to read, spell, handle every day problems of arithmetic, write notes, receipts, business letters, and a sufficient knowledge of physiology and geography, and our country's history to enable one to lead a healthy, intelligent, useful life have been the goals towards which every pupil is being directed.

Free text-books cost the town money and they should be looked after with great care both by the teachers and by the pupils. A careful record of the condition of the books and the date of loan to pupils should be kept by each teacher, together with an accurate record of all supplies received. A sheet of paper wasted every day by each pupil means a loss of several dollars to the district in a year. The same is true in regard to chalk, pencils, etc. I do not mean to be stingy in regard to these things, but I do think each teacher should teach the value of economy and endeavor to avoid all waste.

It is possible to obtain better rates when supplies are purchased in large quantities. If you employ a superintendent he could act as purchasing agent for all his districts and obtain the best prices by ordering all at once subject to the approval and verification of every order by the school board. Now no superintendent is anxious to do this, yet it is one of the ways he could help the district.

The exteriors of most of the schoolhouses are in fair condition. Interior repairs and improvements, including modern furniture, blackboards, better ventilation, heating facilities and toilet arrangements, should be provided as rapidly as possible. The Blue schoolhouse should be the first to be repaired as it contains the largest number of pupils. No schoolhouse can be properly heated by a wood stove, some of the pupils will be too warm while others are too cold. An iron jacket surrounding the stove helps matters considerably and saves a great amount of fuel. The need of ventilation never occurs to many citizens. Yet you have got to have good, fresh air, and plenty of it, or the pupils will be dull and stupid and incapable of doing their best work. Special attention should be given to remedying the sanitary conditions at all the schools. These are usually neglected to the great detriment of the pupils. You would not be satisfied with like conditions at your homes. Then surely you should not be satisfied with them for your children.

You cannot have all the modern conveniences and make all the improvements at once. You can't afford to provide them. But you can do something each year.

The legislature of 1909 made provision for an annual appropriation of $80,000 to aid in improving the schools of the smaller towns of the state. No aid is given to towns whose population is over 3,500, whose equalized valuation is over $7,000, per pupil of average attendance, which maintain an average of less than thirty weeks of school per year, and whose school tax rate is less than $4.50 on $1,000. Each town that complies with the above conditions receives (1) for every twenty-five pupils of average attendance from $.75 to $1.75 per week according to the valuation per pupil; (2) $2.00 per week for every teacher who is a graduate of an approved normal school or who has a state certificate. Landaff has received this year under (1) $58.50. This amount should be much larger next year as the attendance has increased, and a considerable amount will be received under (2).

It is the purpose of the law not to displace the usual appropriations, but to supplement them and to encourage and to assist in the maintenance of longer school years, more regular attendance, better schools, and to give to the pupils of the smaller communities advantages that heretofore have been possible only in the larger places. With the aid thus received the services of efficient teachers may be retained for a longer period, and better qualified teachers engaged as vacancies occur. Other needed improvements are also possible.

At the request of the Superintendent of Public Instruction the school board has made its report this year according to a list that is sent out from the department. It is the purpose of this list to "secure a certain amount of uniformity, lessen liability to misunderstanding, and simplify the final report to the state department."

The school board is required by law to report to the selectmen the amount of money needed for books and supplies also for flags and appurtenances. I would recommend that $125 be raised for books and supplies and $10 for flags.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN S. GILMAN, Superintendent.
